INTERNATIONAL PRIMARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION

Dutch law strictly enforces compulsory education for all children aged 4 to 18 residing in the Netherlands, regardless of their nationality.

Expatriate parents are faced with educational choices for their children upon moving abroad. International schools can be a good choice for the children of foreign parents who are staying temporarily in the Netherlands.

In the Netherlands the majority of international schools are partly subsidised by the Dutch Ministry of Education and are therefore bound by ministry rules; others are privately operated. Publicly-funded primary and secondary international schools in the Netherlands are often international departments within regular Dutch primary and secondary schools. The subsidy provided by the Dutch Ministry of Education makes it possible for these schools to offer English language education to the global standard of international schools for a reasonable fee.

The qualifications for admission to these schools are set by the Dutch Ministry of Education.

Students may be admitted who originate from:

- A non-Dutch family staying in the Netherlands for a limited period of time with an expatriate status.
- An internationally mobile Dutch family, whose children have been largely educated abroad, and for whom an international education will be more advisable to ensure continuity.

A Dutch family bound for an international assignment, whose children will be switching from education in Dutch to English. This transition is limited to a period of one year.

In general, private international schools only have English language education, but the French, German, Japanese and Korean schools teach their national curricula in their native tongue.

Private schools are generally more expensive than government-funded schools; however these schools are not subjected to the Dutch inspectorate's quality control checks. Nevertheless, many international schools are linked to various organisations for their curricula and examinations in order to maintain their standards.

Parents should consult a tax consultant regarding tax exemptions and implications concerning school fees. Employers might also compensate parents for school costs.

Schools

Primary education

Primary education is offered from the age of 4 and lasts until the child reaches the age of 11 or 12.

Public International Departments of Dutch schools use the International Primary Curriculum (IPC), the International Baccalaureate Primary Years Programme (IBPYP), or a combination of the British and Dutch curricula.

Private schools use either one of the international curricula or their respective national curricula (British, Farsi, French, German, Indonesian, Japanese, Polish and American Schools).

Secondary education

During the first four to five years of secondary education, the public international schools prepare their students for either the International General Certificate of Secondary Education (IGCSE) or the International Baccalaureate Middle Years Programme (IBMYP).

The IGCSE is the worldwide recognised equivalent of the British GCSE (and of the Dutch HAVO diploma provided that the student completes at least 6 subjects at extended level).

Students who have successfully completed the IBMYP or the IGCSE programmes can be admitted to the two-year International Baccalaureate programme (IB).

The IB diploma is globally recognised as providing the student with a well balanced pre-university education.

Private schools use either one of the international curricula or their respective national curricula (British, Farsi, French, German, Indonesian, Japanese, Polish and American Schools).

For more information regarding international schools visit the Education Ministry's website www.rijksoverheid.nl/#ref-minocw and browse through to the English-language version; there you will find links to other relevant organisations.

Dutch education

Families expecting to stay in The Netherlands for a longer period of time may wish to consider enrolling their children in a Dutch school. Dutch primary education (Basisschool) is aimed at children aged 4 to 12. Primary schools as well as secondary schools, both public and private, are publicly funded. Most private schools are Catholic or Protestant; however other religion-based schools (Jewish, Muslim... etc) are available as well. Montessori, Jenaplan or Dalton education methods are used in some private schools as well.

Regular Dutch secondary schools are usually divided into three tracks:

- pre-vocational secondary education VMBO (4 years)

INTERNATIONAL PRIMARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION

- general secondary education HAVO (5 years)
- pre-university VWO (6 years)

All types of secondary education are intended for children aged 12 and over.

Bilingual Secondary Education- Tweetalig Onderwijs (TTO)

Some Dutch secondary schools offer a bi-lingual programme (mainly English and Dutch, but also Dutch in combination with French, German and Spanish), based on the Dutch HAVO and VWO-curricula. In this programme non-language subjects such as Sciences, Humanities, Art and PE are taught through the non-Dutch language. The majority of these schools offer bilingual programmes in English and Dutch. At this moment there are approximately > 100 schools all over the Netherlands offering the bilingual programme and more are expected to start in the near future.

This option might be available if the student is a native speaker of English and masters the Dutch language.
